

BENEFITS IN ACTION

Performance Track is an EPA voluntary program that encourages and rewards top environmental performance.

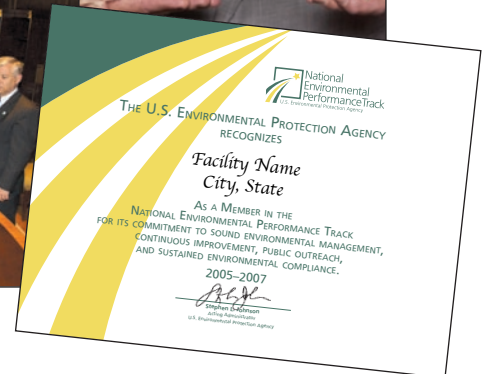

Flying the Performance Track Flag
Lockheed Martin Naval Electronics and Surveillance Systems proudly shows the community its commitment to environmental excellence by flying the Performance Track flag over its Manassas, VA, facility.

Awards at Public Events

New members are recognized as outstanding environmental leaders at the Annual Performance Track Members' Event. Outreach Award winners and new members are awarded certificates of excellence and have photos taken with the EPA Administrator.

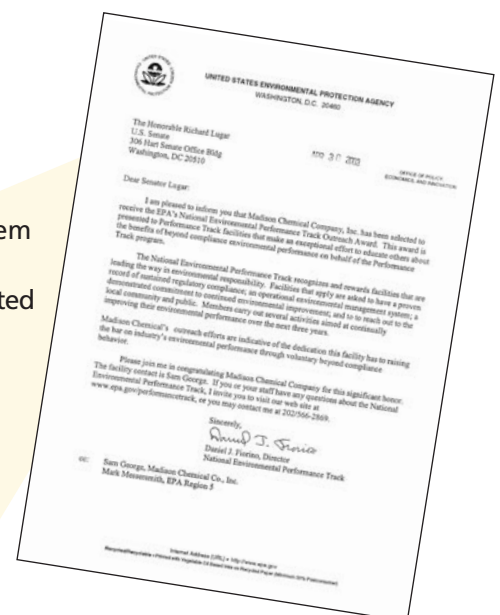

Networking Opportunities

Members have frequent opportunities to network with each other and with EPA officials at regional events across the country and at the Annual Performance Track Members' Event. During these events, members share success stories, lessons learned, and environmental best practices.

Letter of Recognition

EPA sends letters to Congressional Representatives and Senators informing them that a facility in their district has been accepted into the Performance Track program. The letters recognize members for their commitment to the environment.

BENEFITS IN ACTION

Gaining Visibility...

In the News

Whether in magazines, newsletters, or Web sites, Performance Track members are making news across the country. And news media coverage generates momentum for the program and lends credibility to members in their role as key environmental players.

On the Web

Performance Track members are frequently highlighted on the Performance Track Web Site and in the monthly P-Track News publication for members. P-Track news is featured on the program Web site www.epa.gov/performance-track

Through Signage and Branding

Specialty chemicals manufacturer Rohm and Haas displays its pledge to Performance Track with a prominent outdoor sign next to the company's name and logo at its Kankakee, IL, plant — successfully blending environmental stewardship with corporate identity.
